

REMESO Graduate School in Migration, Ethnicity and Society

Post Graduate Courses for PhD and MA students
Linköping University

Spring Courses 2013, in cooperation with Nordic Migration Research

Theories and Politics of International Migration 4 March - 5 April, Intensive week 18-22 March

Course Directors: Associate Professors Peo Hansen and Branka Likic-Brboric
International Guest Lecturer: Gurminder K. Bhambra, Associate Professor of Sociology and Director of the Social Theory Centre at the University of Warwick

The course explores theoretical and empirical aspects of international migration, with more specific analyses of various cases. This enhances students' comprehensive understanding as well as their ability to carry out in-depth analysis. The course sheds light on migration's multidimensional character—including the issues of migrant incorporation, multiculturalism and integration—and familiarizes students with developments at different levels (e.g. global, regional, national and local), as well as with the important interlinkages between these. Besides introducing key theoretical and conceptual tools as well as a range of empirical knowledge, the course also brings forward critical perspectives on current migration policy developments.

Citizenship, Ethnic Division and Social Exclusion: National and Post-national Perspectives

6 May - 7 June, Intensive week 20-24 May

Course Directors: Associate Professors Magnus Dahlstedt and Anders Neergaard
International Guest Lecturer: TBA

This course aims to engage students in exploring and critically analysing perspectives on citizenship, the interrelations between citizenship and migration, and different models of citizenship—post-national, cosmopolitan, trans-national, etc—beyond and below the level of the nation-state. Normative and theoretical conceptions of citizenship are examined in their practical translations with regard to ethnic and social exclusion/inclusion in policy making, legal frameworks and institutions. The course will also draw attention to the condition of social, political and cultural citizenship. A key argument is that the analysis of citizenship must go beyond the nation-state framework. This is illustrated with a closer look at EU-led initiatives designed to combat discrimination and ethnic and social exclusion. Students will explore these initiatives and their close alignment with policies to enhance economic growth, employment and competitiveness.
