Autumn 2016:

Citizenship, Welfare and Integration in the Shadow of the European 'Refugee Crisis'

21 November-23 December 2016, on-campus week in Norrköping 5-9 December
Course Director: Associate Professor Anders Neergaard, REMESO

Lecturers: Associate Professor Anders Neergaard

Guest Lecturer: Frida Boräng, PhD, Department of Political Science, Gothenburg University

Global restructuring of production, recast welfare and labour market regimes, increasing importance of multilevel modes of governance and expressions of culture and identity have brought with them new urgent dilemmas in European societies. They are centred on issues of migration, 'race', citizen-ship, human rights and the social exclusion/inclusion of migrants and new ethnic minorities. This course takes as its point of departure three different but interlinked perspectives: the first perspective is the sheer number of asylum seekers that has arrived to Sweden; the second concerns the increasingly complex relation of multilevel migration governance between national states (Sweden) and supra-states (European Union); finally, the increasing politicization and salience concerning issues of migration and integration.
